THE CHILD AND HIS WORDS

Man makes and uses symbols. The quality of the relationship that a person maintains with his environment — people and things significant to him — and the image of himself by which he lives are determined by his processes of reference. Words are important ingredients of the referential processes. An approach to the study of children is through noting the words they use in their conversations. The consensual validation of their use by children represents one index of the socialization of the child.

This study of the spontaneous speaking vocabulary of children in the primary grades reports the findings of extensive empirical investigations. It was possible only because of the collaboration of several investigators who had available the opportunity to observe many children. The study done thirty years after the International Kindergarten Union list was published is more extensive and should serve even better the needs that the original served. On the basis of experience with the earlier list the following uses may be suggested for the present compilation.

Teachers of Primary children will find here a suitable list for building an experience reading vocabulary, words for training listening skills, a source of material for applied phonics and an indication of interest areas of children.

Textbook writers for the middle grades will find a source of suitable basic vocabulary for writing content and a check to determine difficulty of vocabulary in textbook and other curriculum materials.

Research workers in elementary education will find the list of use in checking the difficulty of vocabulary in appraisal instruments designed to be used with children in the elementary school.

Helen Murphy is Professor of Education and Director of the Reading Clinic in the School of Education, Boston University. Her area of interest is elementary education with special emphasis in reading and child development. A large group of graduate students have been able to contribute because of the interest and coordination provided by Professor Murphy. The students whose names are listed in the bibliography are the primary authors of the spontaneous speaking vocabulary list herewith presented in the pages of the JOURNAL.

THE SPONTANEOUS SPEAKING VOCABULARY OF CHILDREN IN PRIMARY GRADES

The list included in this bulletin summarizes several group studies completed recently at Boston University concerning the spontaneous speaking vocabulary of children in Kindergarten, Grades one, two and three. The I. K. U. list[1] published in 1928 has been a valuable tool for teachers of young children and for those writing materials to be used with them as it listed words in the speaking vocabulary of children on entering grade one. In each study care was taken to include only words in the speaking vocabulary of children. An attempt was made to open all avenues of experience by employing several techniques for stimulating conversation rather than limiting the recording to just words which would occur normally in a school situation.

The first of our studies, Hodgkins Alma, was the recording of spontaneous vocabulary of nursery school children for one year. The second, Battit et al, extended from November to January and was an attempt to discover various techniques valuable in stimulating conversation within the classroom as well as possible ways of recording the vocabulary. Films and filmstrips, stories, discussions and pictures were used in all the classrooms. The recording was done by the classroom teachers, by the parents who volunteered to help, by the use of tape recorders and in one instance by members of the High School Transcription Class who visited the classes at assigned times, took the conversations in shorthand and typed the lists for the teachers.

The third study, Corcoran et al, continued from October through February. Just one technique was used in each classroom and an attempt was made to select pictures, films and subjects for discussion which would cover a wide variety of topics. The fourth study, Cullinane et al, used all possible ways of stimulating conversation in all classrooms and continued throughout the school year. The material in this study was organized around the seasons in order to insure some opportunities for the summer experiences. In all of the studies spontaneous vocabulary was recorded whenever possible.

It is interesting to observe how the particular experiences of the children were evidenced in their conversations. In reply to a kindergarten teacher's request for the highest and lowest things known, the responses within the class included these statements — God and the Devil, the Empire State Building and the subway, the ace and the deuce. Many specialized words as lobster fisherman and Boston Common occurred frequently.

All children with the exception of two classes from Georgia were living in New England. The list is primarily a New England list but does have a substantial running count back of it and includes responses of many children in many different classrooms.

[1] A Study of the Vocabulary of Children before Entering the First Grade — By the Child Study Committee of the International Kindergarten Union, Baltimore, 1928.

The distribution of running count by grades as well as the number of classrooms involved follows:

	Running Count	Classrooms
Kindergarten	371,281	14
Grade One	362,208	19
Grade Two	218,636	22
Grade Three	242,973	15
Total	1,195,098	70

The kindergarten words with the exception of local words are presented regardless of frequency. Words that had a total frequency of five or more in grades one, two and three are included, all others were dropped.

Two additional studies, five and six, have been completed dealing with the comparisons of the Boston University List and the I.K.U. and Gates Primary Lists, and the classification of the new list. 906 words were common to all lists. 1574 occurred on both I.K.U. and Boston University Lists and 990 of the words on the Gates Primary List were on the new list. Some of the vocabulary used frequently now, but not on the list of thirty years ago are terms of aviation, radio and television. It has not been feasable to include all of the findings of the last two studies in this bulletin.
